Second FAWCO meeting with the U.S. Treasury Department

On November 13, U.S. Liaison Lucy Laederich joined AARO, ACA and Democrats Abroad at a follow-up meeting in Washington at the invitation of the Treasury Department/IRS to discuss some progress made with respect to FATCA legislation and to make recommendations for the immediate future. The delegation learned promising things:

Treasury has made a concerted effort to track the foreign financial institutions (FFIs) that, at least in theory because of FATCA, are closing accounts held abroad by Americans. Wishing to ease the reporting burden on individual FFIs, they have also made an ambitious drive to enter into intergovernmental agreements under which FFIs will report essentially high-risk and very high-value accounts to their governments which, in turn, will report to the United States, rather than having the FFIs in direct contact with the IRS. To date, only one such agreement has been concluded, with the UK, but over 50 are in negotiations.

Treasury and the IRS also want to make it easier overall for FFIs to comply with FATCA regulations and will, under certain conditions, find “looseners” such as raising the threshold for reporting accounts or reducing the number of years for which reporting is required, if the FFI can prove that accounts have not been denied to any U.S. citizens who are bona fide residents in the country in question. For the moment, this condition is not included in the U.S./U.K. agreement but the intent is to add it.

The central priority of the overseas delegation was to recommend the creation of an “advisory council” composed of representatives of overseas organizations to work with Treasury and the IRS in their ongoing process of refining and implementing FATCA regulations. Given growing instances of renunciation of citizenship, reports of widespread concern and fear regarding Voluntary Disclosure programs, stories of Americans whose foreign spouses and partners refuse FATCA reporting of their financial assets and simply close joint household or business accounts, leaving the American in a position of financial jeopardy, and the realization that many Americans, out of fear or ignorance, are finding themselves in a position of non-compliance and therefore illegality, both sides appear to agree that it is urgently necessary to work together as the deadline for complete implementation of FATCA approaches.

One recommendation made in April fell on sympathetic ears: Treasury is now building up a list of the tax-free foreign pension plans which will not be subject to FATCA reporting, realizing that some such plans are essential to the financial security of U.S. citizens living abroad.

Lastly, while the IRS hopes it will become the norm in a very short time, the overseas delegation pointed out the difficulty of e-filing in many parts of the world where internet access cannot be taken for granted.

In all, the meeting must be seen as positive: not only have certain steps been actually taken in response to overseas concerns but also it appears clear that Treasury and the IRS are willing to maintain an ongoing dialogue with their overseas constituency, the goal being maximum compliance but also equity.

This year for the third time, thanks to FAWCO’s partner Overseas Vote Foundation (OVF), visitors to the FAWCO website were able to register to vote and request their ballots directly from the FAWCO home page via a dedicated website hosted by OVF. 2012 was the second presidential election for which this service was available, though voters were also able to register/request ballots for the mid-term election in 2010. While the 2012 numbers may not seem impressive, they doubled over that period (to 724 in all) and do represent 20% of the total FAWCO population (though many users were undoubtedly actually visitors to the FAWCO home page).

Voter profile
Not surprisingly, the majority of those using the OVF-FAWCO website (80%) were female. Over one-half of all users (58.3%) were aged between 40 and 65 and encouragingly, four of those were under 18 at the time of their request, with birthdays falling shortly before the election. The population was almost exactly split between voters living abroad permanently and those overseas for a temporary stay. One-half (50.27%) of those requesting their ballots were voting either for the first time ever (6.4%) or for the first time abroad (43.9%) while almost one-third (32.6%) had never voted at all before moving abroad.

Request type
While the website was used essentially by voters requesting their ballots using the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) form, 33 requested the emergency Federal Write-in Absentee Ballot. It will be easier to explain this number in light of overall post-election survey results as, at the time of writing, it was impossible to know whether these voters had requested the FWAB as a precautionary measure or at the last minute, because the ballot they had requested had not yet arrived.

Voting state
Reflecting common statistics on the overseas voting population, over one-third of those using the OVF-FAWCO website voted in just three states, New York, Texas and California (also the states with the highest percentages of population vs. total U.S. population). FAWCO 2012 statistics closely parallel statistics generated by OVF after the 2008 election with the top ten states exactly the same, though in a slightly different order: in ascending order, FL, OH, VA, NJ, MA, PA, IL, NY, TX and CA.

Statistics on users of the OVF-FAWCO website are very much in line with those found by OVF, the Federal Voting Assistance Program and the Election Assistance Commission on the total overseas voter community and (with the exception of women being in the great majority) represent, in a sense, a “thumbnail” image of those voters. FAWCO is grateful for the support of non-partisan Overseas Vote Foundation and proud to facilitate participation in the overseas voting process.
Learning Leadership at the
Eleanor Roosevelt Center

Since 2008, in honor of Eleanor Roosevelt’s efforts to empower the next generation of principled leaders who will create a just and sustainable world, FAWCO has been supporting the Eleanor Roosevelt Girls Leadership Workshop (GLW).

The goal of the nine-day GLW workshop is to form confident, independent, courageous and passionate women leaders through the study of Eleanor Roosevelt’s work and accomplishments. The program also organized a two-day trip to New York City to meet with professionals from the United States Mission to the UN, the NoVo Foundation and the Girl Up Campaign. Following my participation in GLW, I now understand what a leader must be. A leader shows compassion and confidence in times of pain and despair and inspires others to do the same. Being a true leader means helping other people on the team, not only leading them, but being one of them while investing time in believing in them. At the end of the program, a leadership award was presented by the Giving Back Foundation. I had the honor of receiving this award based on four leadership qualities - courage, curiosity, collaboration and compassion.

- Valia Mitsaki, daughter of Alexandra Mitsaki (AWO, Greece)

Eleanor Roosevelt once said, ‘The future belongs to those who believe in the beauty of their dreams.’ GLW helped me learn about following my dreams, leadership and acting like a lady by speaking up and expressing my feelings about issues to people I might not know very well. I now believe I can change the world in a small way by helping girls in my school increase their self-esteem through art and music. I’m paying tribute to Eleanor Roosevelt and her ideals by making my school a more nurturing environment for girls. I would encourage every teenage girl to apply to the GLW - it was the best experience of my life.”

Former Vietnamese Refugee Appointed to UNHCR

The Vietnamese Diaspora that followed the end of the Vietnam War in 1975 was one of the largest mass migrations of the late twentieth century. With tremendous effort, the UNHCR helped nearly one million boat people from Vietnam settle in the United States or elsewhere.

When I was 16 years old, I escaped Vietnam on a wooden boat with my two siblings and 370 other people. We endured violent storms, pirate raids and severely unsanitary conditions to make it to Indonesia, only to find ourselves stranded on an inhabited island for almost three months until we were rescued by the UNHCR. Every day, someone died from disease and malnutrition.

On June 20th, as part of World Refugee Day, I was appointed Special Representative for Australia for UNHCR, the UN Refugee Agency’s charity in Australia. As my grandparents often taught me - “uong nuoc nho nguon,” meaning “remember the source when you drink the water” – I will never forget the UNHCR.

There are now more than 43 million people worldwide who have been forced to leave their homes because of conflict and persecution. In 2011, more than 800,000 people crossed borders in search of refuge. This was higher than at any time in the last decade.

Having made a pledge to raise awareness of boat people and their stories, last year I published my first book, Boat People: Personal Stories from the Vietnamese Exodus 1975-1996. On June 4, 2011 in New York, my book received an award as Best Regional Non-Fiction (Australia and New Zealand) in the 2012 Independent Publisher Book Awards. Australia for UNHCR National Director, Naomi Steer, has said that the story “reminds us of the frustration, humiliation, joy, hope and resilience of refugees.”
FAWCO’s Target Program is in the home stretch and our race to the finish of this three-year awareness and fund-raising program is getting exciting! Our goal was to increase awareness about the global issue of water, as well as raise money for Wells for Clean Water in Cambodia. The response from clubs has been overwhelming and over $115,000 has been raised to date, resulting in the creation of about 550 wells in Cambodia.

Another goal is to have as many of FAWCO’s clubs as possible participate in the Target Program, and as of September 2012, about 60% of FAWCO’s clubs have raised awareness while raising funds. Many clubs who have not yet been actively involved are planning water events for the last months of 2012 to join in FAWCO’s water family. Still other clubs have supported alternate water projects. While their donations are not shown in the above total, they will certainly be included in our final Target total...and more water donations keep coming in!

Together, we are truly changing the flow...

FAWCO clubs raised over $115,000 which created about 550 wells in Cambodia.

10,356 families began growing rice year-round this past program year.

Their spendable income changes dramatically - less than 50 cents a day to an average of $6,000 USD per year ($16.00 per day).
Target Water Project: Report from the Field, on the Ground in Cambodia

By Jane Ritskes - Founder of Tabitha

In the past 12 months, we were able to install 2,597 sources of water directly impacting 5,350 families. The impact on our families is immense! Their spendable income changes dramatically - less than 50 cents a day to an average of $6000 USD per year ($16.00 per day). When I visited our Takeo project, I was stunned by the intelligence of our families. The families had an average of two hectares of land, but the land was broken into various plots where they were growing rice at different stages. Families were constantly harvesting and earning monthly income from their rice.

One lady, Theira, was so excited with eyes full of joy as she showed me her plots being harvested that day, but it is the men who are very clear as to the impact this has had on their lives. A consistent comment was, “I bought my children back.” I cannot begin to imagine under what circumstances so many of the men chose to sell their children, but I do know the circumstances that are bringing the children home. 10,356 of our families began growing rice year-round this past program year.

For other families, growing vegetables of all kinds brings about change. Last week in our Kandal project, I visited 60 hectares of newly grown vegetables: corn, tomatoes, lettuce of all kinds, and surprisingly, things like Spanish onions, large green peppers and ginger. (I never knew that Cambodia could grow such a wide variety of foods.) 9,120 families were able to begin raising vegetables this past year.

Thanks to Tabitha supporters, 2,597 new sources of water were installed this year, directly impacting 5,350 families.

It is the men who are very clear as to the impact this has had on their lives. A consistent comment was, “I bought my children back.”

276 Field wells - used by two families for a kitchen garden, cooking and drinking, personal hygiene, and for the irrigation of 10 acres, allowing for intensive year round agriculture.
Americana for Children

Remember when you said The Pledge of Allegiance every day in school? I do. But are your school-age children learning “The Pledge” or many of those other bits of American culture that we learned either formally or “by osmosis” by virtue of our having grown up in the U.S.? Most American schools overseas are American in terms of faculty and curriculum, but not in terms of enrollment, and therefore, things “American” can’t really be taught. Or maybe your children are attending international or local schools or are being home-schooled? Unless you, the parent, make a conscientious effort to educate your offspring, they are probably unfamiliar with many of those traditions, songs, and histories that help give us that “American” identity.

Women in Doha (AWA Qatar) and Dubai (AWA Dubai) have decided to do something about this and have started monthly programs entitled “Americana” or “Americana for Children” that have been hugely popular with children (ages 3-10) and their parents alike. They would like to share those programs with you so that you can easily start your own Americana program with very little effort. For more information, visit our page at FAWCO.org/Americana.

Who are the individuals organizing this program? Most, but not all, are mothers. Some, but not many, are teachers. All are enthusiastic people who themselves want to learn more about the U.S. and want to pass on their enthusiasm and knowledge to the children. AWA Qatar is fortunate to have a music teacher who leads the singing. The rest of us, who come from various backgrounds, find ourselves doing things we’ve never done before (including writing skits). We’re saving all our materials and recycling them as needed. Best of all, the kids keep coming back for more, asking if they can be in the skits and giving advice to others on showing proper respect for the flag. There was a real gap in their education and we’re doing what we can to fill it. And what’s great is that we, the adults, are learning at the same time!

March of Peace in Srebrenica

In July 1995, more than 8,000 Bosnian Muslim men and boys of Srebrenica were killed marking the largest mass murder committed in Europe since World War II. In July 2012, I had the honor of participating in the annual March of Peace a three-day, 120 km route which commemorates victims of the 1995 genocide. The march, now in its eighth year, takes the exact route followed by the refugees as they tried to escape the massacre. Over the years, this march has attracted thousands of participants. I participated with a fundraising team from Women for Women International, an organization whose mission is to serve women survivors of war.

One of the biggest challenges of the trek was the heat and humidity. I also had not realized just how much of the terrain was hilly to mountainous. At one point, part of our team took what we thought was a “shortcut” and ended up climbing an extremely steep hill with very few handholds – a terrain typical of what the fleeing men had experienced. As daunting as the physical challenges were, we found ourselves tested equally by the emotional challenge. Our team included a man, Elvir, who had been part of the original march to safety when he was only 16 years old. Elvir’s father and brothers who did not flee “into the woods” were all murdered near Srebrenica.

To learn more about the work of Women for Women International, or to consider participating in the March of Peace in 2013, visit their website. You may also join FAWCO’s participation in WiWI’s Join Me at the Bridge campaign on March 8th at the conference in Bern.
To quote Valia Mitsaki, a FAWCO daughter (AWO Greece) who attended the Eleanor Roosevelt Girls Leadership Worldwide (page 3), “FAWCO has helped me understand that in this universe I don’t only exist as an individual but also as part of the worldwide community with a basic goal to sustain the well-being of my world and the people in it.”

Reading Theresa Hartwell’s moving account of her March for Peace or Carina Hoang’s own harrowing refugee story resulting in her work with UNHRC (page 3) or Janne Ritkes’ letter about the impact of FAWCO wells in Cambodia (page 5), I feel blessed to be part of this global community, where FAWCO members can and do make a difference every day.

In 2012, FAWCO is proud of our work in member services, implementing a best practices online library sourced by our member clubs to be shared with each other. We are proud of our US Issues Team, who has been able to raise awareness on Capital Hill, in the press and with our members about the hardships on Americans living overseas caused by the new tax and banking regulations. We are proud of the work of our Global Issues Task Forces, particularly the global calls to action to raise awareness on women and children issues. And most significantly, we are proud that we have improved the lives of thousands of families in Cambodia through our Target Water Project (photo, right).

Each and every one of us can make a change, whether it be in our own neighborhood or through FAWCO, to the wider world. Together, our voices carry far and wide.

Register now for FAWCO’s Biennial Conference in Bern, Switzerland, March 6-9, 2013. Come celebrate the progress of women with our conference theme, women tradition innovation. Registration and information at fawco.org.
FAWCO Adds Value to its Member Clubs

All American and international women’s clubs around the world attend to the needs of their members for connection and friendship. Many of these clubs also reach out to their local communities through fundraising initiatives and hands-on community service. Only a small number of clubs choose to leap out of their local pond into a bigger sea with FAWCO.

FAWCO clubs are dynamic. They are ready to grow and develop. They acknowledge and respond to the changing needs of their membership by tapping into the FAWCO network to share best practices, acquire knowledge and develop the skills they need to be successful, strong and sustainable in the 21st century.

FAWCO clubs reach out. They are ready to enlarge their circle of influence. While caring for their membership and local communities, they also invite and embrace opportunities to engage in the greater world through the FAWCO network, resources and philanthropic programs.

FAWCO clubs take action. They are ready to take part on the world stage. They support the UN Millennium Development Goals by participating in philanthropic projects or applying for grants through the FAWCO Foundation in support of their preferred development projects.

FAWCO clubs stand up. They are ready to have a bigger voice. They join forces with FAWCO to defend the rights of American women overseas concerning citizenship, voting, taxes and banking and provide up to date information on these issues to their membership. They also join forces with FAWCO to take a stand on issues that international women care about: women’s rights, education, environment and health.

Region 2 Meeting

Health and Well-being in Stockholm

What do health and well-being mean to you? In late September, over 50 women from all over Region 2 (Scandinavia and Russia) gathered in Stockholm to explore this question.

The weekend kicked off with a potluck hosted by AWC of Stockholm. That evening, local club members mingled with out of town FAWCO guests and received a cultural boost from a reading of Nanna Svendsen’s poem “Cross Cultural” and a viewing of Joanie Rafidi’s documentary about the history of the AWC of Stockholm.

The meeting on Saturday was held at the beautiful History Museum. First, there was an overview of FAWCO from 2nd VP Elizabeth Abbot, then an explanation of “water footprint,” from FAWCO’s Environment Task Force Chair Kara Fairchild. We followed with a tutorial on how to organize your finances and information online with the understanding that to have control of one’s financial life is a form of wellbeing. The session ended with an introduction to Traditional Chinese Medicine (TCM) and the connection between mind, body and soul. In between serious sessions, participants were treated to short exercise sessions and tours of different museum rooms.

2nd Vice President Elizabeth Abbot explains added value and the ways in which individual clubs can engage in the greater world through the FAWCO network, resources and philanthropic programs.

FAWCO clubs want to give their membership something more. Through the FAWCO alumni association (FAUSA) repatriating members have continued support. Transient members have support with future relocation(s). Long-term abroad members find growth and development opportunities outside their local club and community. All members gain a greater sense of purpose and meaning through opportunities to interact with women all over the world, participate in UN initiatives and give back.

By Kara Fairchild - AWC Gothenburg, FAWCO Region 2 Coordinator

All-in-all, the Region 2 Regional was fun, energetic and lively. Thank you to Helen Borland and the AWC of Stockholm for a fantastic weekend!
Region 4 Travels to Amsterdam

This year’s FAWCO Region 4 Meeting was hosted by AWC Amsterdam with fifteen women travelling from within the region and beyond.

Participants were welcomed on Friday evening at the home of the AWC Amsterdam treasurer for dinner together with local club members. On Saturday morning, we got down to business with Elizabeth Abbott, FAWCO 2nd VP, who provided an informative overview of FAWCO.

There were three different philanthropic presentations. The first was from Emily van Eerten who updated us on the FAWCO Target Program. AWC Amsterdam members Christie Clark and Carol Tarr-Tsaltas gave us an overview of philanthropic efforts of their club which included helping a local women’s shelter and traveling around the world with Habitat for Humanity. Carol is an outreach ambassador in the fight to end domestic violence and she gave a dramatic, yet informative, presentation. Finally, Eileen Baker from AWC The Hague described her club’s efforts with the Heart Pillow Project.

After lunch, AWC Amsterdam member Constanze Woelfe gave a presentation on tax issues for Americans living abroad informing us on tax law updates. On a lighter note, we had an American comedian from a local comedy club give us a few laughs over the upcoming election, as well as poking fun of some things in the Dutch culture. To end the day, Elizabeth Abbott had each rep talk about one best practice from their club. Ideas were exchanged on multiple issues of club success.

Region 5 Meeting in Augsburg with the AIWA

Our annual November-Regional FAWCO and FUN meeting was a gem! All eight clubs were represented, some with up to five members, plus a guest club from Erlangen, a possible new FAWCO member.

Our meeting started with a reading by Wendy Williams, member of the AWA Vienna and author of The Globalization of Love. The key topic of our meeting, The Future Directions of FAWCO, was managed by Laurie Richardson, AWA Vienna, Committee Chairperson of FAWCO’s Resolutions and Recommendations.

In another session, FAWCO President My-Linh Kunst reviewed our experiences with FAWCO’s now ending Target Water Project and collected proposals for changes for future Target Programs. Tricia Saur from the AIWC Cologne reported on the HR6263 and offered information and support to other clubs. Tonya Teichert, from the AWC Taunus gave an update on the Violence against Women Task Force. Elizabeth Abbott and Margaret Hilditch gave updates on the goals and work of FAWCO and the FAWCO Foundation and collected issues and proposals from the clubs.
This past June, Helena Turner from FAWCO sponsor US Tax & Financial Services Ltd, London, traveled to the West Midlands, England, to present a tax seminar to a group of North American Connection (NAC) members and concerned spouses. Those who attended found Helena’s advice helpful in navigating the ever-changing landscape of expatriate US tax compliance. The NAC keeps an archive of the US Tax & Financial Services presentations and handouts on their Yahoo Groups service so that any member who could not attend may still download this important information.

Since the presentation, the IRS has announced more lenient measures in dealing with delinquent expat filers. (Read about the new measures that took effect on September 1, 2012 at US Tax’s online blog.) You may also see their website to subscribe to the US Tax and Financial Services newsletter to have these updates delivered directly to your inbox. US Tax and Financial Services also offers special FAWCO tax preparation rates for anyone who still has not filed their income taxes or for anyone confused about which forms you are required to file while residing outside of the USA.

Don’t forget that many of us are also responsible for filing an FBAR/foreign bank account declaration if the balance of our foreign bank account exceeds $10,000 on any one day.

AAWE Paris FAWCO Rep Sallie Chaballier has launched the club’s online auction of hand-painted “water” glasses, a fitting fund-raiser for FAWCO’s Target Water Project. A donation from one of the members of the AAWE’s Handicrafts group, the glasses are inspired by 16th century Venetian designs – meticulously hand-painted for a 21st century cause. The project is not only a FAWCO fund-raiser, but a means to raise club awareness of the importance of water in the developing world. Every sip counts!
In the second of four big celebrations planned for this year, the American Women’s Club of Amsterdam celebrated their 85th anniversary on the evening of October 6th after a day filled with the intense program of the FAWCO Region 4 Conference.

The anniversary party was held at Desmet Studios, the façade of which dates to 1926, and it showcased the light-hearted, fun-loving and humorous side of AWCA women and their partners. Since the club was founded in 1927, the theme was The Roaring ’20s and individual interpretations included everything from gangsters and molls to glamorous stars of stage and screen. There were plenty of feathered boas, feathered headbands, opera-length pearls, fringed and sequined dresses and fedoras in attendance. On the dance floor, located behind the prohibition-themed bar serving “bathtub” gin cocktails, members tried their feet at the Lindy Hop, the Charleston and other dances of the era.

AIWCC was founded in 1962 by Mrs. Tomlison, the then U.S. Consul General’s wife. The small group of members wanted to help the lepers in a local hospital and their first fundraiser was selling greeting cards. In 1963, the AWC opened up to English-speaking women of all nationalities and was registered with the authorities as the American Women’s Club. In 1978 AWC joined FAWCO and in 1996 was changed to American International Women’s Club of Casablanca.

Presently, there are more than 120 members of 25 different nationalities. AIWCC organizes social activities, but its main objective is to unite energies and donations to benefit local charities and various development projects throughout Morocco. In the last ten years AIWCC has distributed about 250,000Dh annually ($29,000) to charities - that’s 2.5 million dirhams ($300,000) in the last decade!

On Wednesday, September 12th the AIWC Cologne held their annual Welcome Back Brunch. This year, there was a buzz in anticipation of the raffle as the talented ladies from the club’s Stitch ‘n’ Bitch group had spent the previous four months creating a beautiful water themed afghan; 18 individuals contributed 130 squares. As Activity Co-Leader Sally Webersinke explains, “The experience of working towards our goal so intensively, so cooperatively and yet still with lots of chatter and laughter was very rewarding and has certainly deepened our friendships.” The raffle of the afghan raised € 1330! All proceeds will be donated to FAWCO’s Target Water Project to support the building of wells in Cambodia.

FAWCO clubs around the world have embraced the Heart Pillow Project creating and distributing heart pillows for breast cancer patients in their local communities. The international company COCO-MAT, a recognized leader for sleep products, bed linens, towels and furniture for homes and hotels, has joined the Heart Pillow Project in the countries in which it operates (South Korea, China, Spain, Saudi Arabia, Greece, Germany, France, Belgium and the USA).

In Greece, COCO-MAT sponsored a project together with AWOG Athens. Project coordinator Grace Christovasilis is hoping to spread this sponsorship to other FAWCO clubs with Heart Pillow Projects.
2013 FAWCO Foundation Programs

The 2013 Foundation Programs will feature $21,500 in Education Awards and $31,500 in Development Grants. Guidelines, eligibility information and applications can be found at fawcofoundation.org.

The Development Grants program includes grants in seven categories, each of which targets an area of global concern in keeping with the UN Millennium Development Goals. The Development Grant program is open to all FAWCO clubs and to FAUSA, each of which can propose two of their charitable projects. These $4,500 grants can provide immediate financial relief in a difficult economic situation for organizations dedicated to helping underprivileged populations throughout the world.

2013 DEVELOPMENT GRANTS
$4,500 each:
• AW Surrey Hope Through Education
• Critical Health Concerns sponsored in part by AWC Zurich
• FAUSA Right to Food and Water sponsored in part by FAUSA and Copley Family
• Pam Dahlgren Educating Africa's Children
• American Women of the Eastern Province Skills for Life sponsored in part by AIL Florence
• Around the Corner, A World Away sponsored in part by AWC Genoa in memory of Carol Bordoni
• The Coughlan Foundation Prevention and Treatment of HIV/AIDS, Malaria and Tuberculosis

The Education Awards program includes three Academic Studies Awards for children of FAWCO and FAUSA members studying in the fields of Arts, Science and Humanities. Two Awards are open to FAWCO and FAUSA members pursuing degree-based studies and skills-enhancement programs. We continue to offer The Dual Cultural Award for children or grandchildren of FAWCO members wishing to undertake high school programs or specialized summer programs in the United States.

2013 ACADEMIC AWARDS:
• Viola Wheeler Arts Award, $4,000
• Sciences Award, $3,500 sponsored in part by AWC Zurich and AWC Genoa in memory of Frieda Bacciagalupe
• Humanities Award, $3,500 sponsored in part by AAWE Paris in memory of Gertrude de Gallaix

FAWCO MEMBERS AWARDS:
• AWC Basel Members Award for University Degree Programs, $5,000 sponsored by Shirley Kearney
• FAUSA Members Skills Enhancement Award, $3,000

OTHER AWARDS:
• Dual Cultural Award in memory of Suzanne Ersmann, $1,500 sponsored in part by Donna Ersmann and AWC Bern

Your Club can Sponsor a Development Grant or Educational Award

What better way to celebrate a significant club anniversary, honor a special club member or memorialize a family member than to support a Development Grant (DG)? To be named as a co-sponsor, you need to make a minimum contribution of $1,000. To have your name in the title, the contribution is $4,500. However, ANY size donation gets us closer to our goal of fully funding all the DGs your clubs want.

We also need funding for our annual Education Awards: Arts, Humanities, Sciences and the Dual Cultural Award. For more information contact president@fawcofoundation.org.

NEEED Scholarship Program

The FAWCO Foundation continues our partnership with The Friends of Burkina Faso and NEEED (Nimbus, Enfance, Environnement, Education et Developpement, a local non-profit organization in Northern Burkina Faso) to provide post-secondary school scholarships to young village women. Once graduating from secondary school, they will continue their studies in midwifery, nursing, primary school teaching or continue on to university. Our 2012 donation of $6,000 will fully fund the education and housing of two girls for a two-year nursing training and one girl for a two-year primary teaching program. For more information see fawcofoundation.org.
